Jacob and Charles Moon were born and raised in a small town in Ohio. They were close in age and shared a love of sports and the outdoors. When the Korean War broke out in 1950, both brothers felt a duty to serve their country. They enlisted in the Army and were assigned to the same battalion, the 37th Infantry Regiment, 19th Infantry Division.

The 37th Infantry Regiment was one of the first American units to enter combat in Korea. The regiment fought in some of the war's most intense battles, including the Battle of Chosin Reservoir, which was one of the bloodiest battles of the war. During the battle, Jacob and Charles Moon fought side-by-side, facing overwhelming odds. They witnessed the horrors of war firsthand and saw many of their friends killed.

Despite the horrors they witnessed, Jacob and Charles Moon never lost their courage or their faith in each other. They fought bravely and with distinction, earning the respect of their fellow soldiers. They were both awarded the Bronze Star for their heroism in combat.

The Korean War ended in 1953, but the memories of the war stayed with Jacob and Charles Moon for the rest of their lives. They returned home heroes, but they were also haunted by the things they had seen and done. They struggled to adjust to civilian life and often had nightmares about the war.

In the late 1990s, Jacob and Charles Moon decided to write a book about their experiences in Korea. They wanted to tell their story and to honor the memory of their comrades who had fallen in battle. The book, titled "Combat Reckoning: The Jock Miles Moon Brothers Korean War Story," was published in 2000.

Combat Reckoning is a powerful and moving memoir that tells the story of two brothers who fought side-by-side in one of the most brutal wars of the 20th century. The book is a testament to their courage, sacrifice, and unbreakable brotherhood.

Combat Reckoning is a must-read for anyone interested in military history, the Korean War, or the stories of those who have served our country.
