Origins of Georgia Stephen

The character of Georgia Stephen was first conceived during a brainstorming session between Stan Lee and John Buscema. Lee wanted to create a female character who could rival the power and cosmic nature of the Silver Surfer. Buscema, inspired by the popular television show "I Dream of Jeannie," suggested a character who could channel cosmic energy through a genie-like device.

Together, Lee and Buscema developed the concept of Georgia Stephen, a young woman who possessed a mystical amulet that allowed her to tap into the Power Cosmic. This amulet was later revealed to be a fragment of the Power Cosmic itself, scattered across the universe after the destruction of the planet Zenn-La.

Malus believes that Georgia's amulet holds the key to unlocking the secrets of the universe and is determined to obtain it for his own sinister purposes.

The Silver Surfer, sensing Georgia's innocence and potential, intervenes and defends her from Malus and his scientists. Together, they form an unlikely alliance to defeat Malus and protect the secrets of the Power Cosmic.
