The South Vietnamese Army is now in disarray, and it is only a matter of time before the North Vietnamese Army takes over the entire country.

The capture of Hue is a major psychological blow to the South Vietnamese Army. Hue is the former imperial capital of Vietnam, and it is a city of great cultural and historical significance. The fact that the North Vietnamese Army has been able to capture Hue shows that the South Vietnamese Army is no longer able to defend the country.

The South Vietnamese Army is now in a state of collapse. The army is demoralized, and it is no longer able to effectively fight the North Vietnamese Army. The South Vietnamese government is also in a state of chaos, and it is no longer able to provide the army with the support it needs.

The North Vietnamese Army is now in a position to take over the entire country. The army is well-trained and well-equipped, and it is far superior to the South Vietnamese Army. The North Vietnamese Army is also supported by the Soviet Union and China, two of the world's most powerful countries.

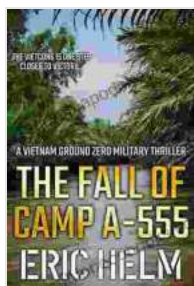

It is only a matter of time before the North Vietnamese Army takes over the entire country. The South Vietnamese Army is no longer able to defend the country, and the South Vietnamese government is no longer able to provide the army with the support it needs.
