Ellie is a young girl living in London during World War II. She has a happy childhood, surrounded by her loving family and friends. However, everything changes when the war breaks out. Ellie's father is killed in action, and her mother is forced to work long hours to support the family. Ellie is left alone to fend for herself, and she quickly becomes a target for bullies.

One day, Ellie is caught in a bombing raid. She witnesses the death of her best friend, and she is seriously injured. Ellie is taken to a hospital, where she is treated for her injuries. However, she is deeply traumatized by what she has seen, and she begins to withdraw into herself.

After the war, Ellie is sent to live with her aunt and uncle in the countryside. She is still struggling to come to terms with her experiences, and she often has nightmares and flashbacks. However, she slowly begins to heal with the help of her aunt and uncle. She makes new friends, and she starts to enjoy life again.

However, Ellie's past continues to haunt her. She is always afraid that the war will start again, and she is constantly on the lookout for danger. She also has difficulty forming close relationships, because she is afraid of getting hurt. Ellie's story is a powerful reminder of the devastating impact of war on children. It is a story of trauma, resilience, and redemption.

Themes

Tomorrow the World explores a number of important themes, including:

- The impact of war on children: The novel shows how war can traumatize children and rob them of their innocence.
- Resilience: Ellie is a resilient character who is able to overcome her trauma and build a new life for herself.
- Redemption: The novel shows how even the darkest experiences can lead to redemption and healing.

Characters

The characters in Tomorrow the World are well-developed and believable. Ellie is a complex and sympathetic character who is easy to root for. The other characters, such as Ellie's aunt and uncle, are also well-drawn and add depth to the story.

- Ellie: A young girl who is traumatized by the war.
- Aunt Joan: Ellie's aunt who takes her in after the war.
- Uncle Tom: Ellie's uncle who helps her to heal from her trauma.
- Michael: A boy who Ellie meets in the countryside and who becomes her friend.

Setting

The novel is set against the backdrop of World War II. The setting is well-described and brings the story to life. The reader can feel the fear and uncertainty of the characters as they live through the war.

Writing Style

Josephine Cox's writing style is clear and concise. She uses simple language to tell a complex story. The novel is well-paced and keeps the reader engaged from beginning to end.

Tomorrow the World is a powerful and moving novel that explores the devastating impact of war on the lives of children. It is a story of trauma, resilience, and redemption. The novel is beautifully written and the characters are well-developed and believable. I highly recommend this novel to anyone who is interested in historical fiction, or who wants to learn more about the impact of war on children.
